

African-American Freedom Trail

Based on historical maps and documents, the original African Burial Ground is believed to be more than five acres in size, about five current-day city blocks. The African Burial Ground is bounded by Duane Street (north), Broadway (west), City Hall Park (south), and Centre Street (east). Much of the cemetery today lies underneath buildings along Reade, Chambers, and Broadway. Human remains have been routinely uncovered along Chambers Street and in City Hall Park.

- Fort Amsterdam 1
- Broadway 2
- Fraunces' Tavern 3
- Downing's Oyster House 4
- The Wall 5
- Wall Street Slave Market 6
- 1712 Slave Revolt 7
- African Free School 8
- St. Peter's Church 9
- Dr. James McCune Smith 10
- Pinkster Celebration 11
- 1741 Executions 12
- Road To Harlem 13
- 1863 Draft Riots 14
- Land of the Blacks 15
- African Burial Ground 16
- Frederick Douglass 17
- Abyssinian Baptist Church 18
- Mother AME Zion Church 19
- Freedom's Journal 20
- Ruggles' Boarding House 21

1. Fort Amsterdam

In 1625 enslaved Africans arrived in New Amsterdam. Among their first tasks was to build the first fort on Manhattan Island, known as Fort Amsterdam.
One Bowling Green (site of the National Museum of the American Indian)

2. Broadway

The city's first municipal work force, African slaves cleared land and shoreline and widened Native American trails, including a wide road—later known as Broadway.
Broadway

3. Fraunces' Tavern

A popular restaurant owned by Samuel Fraunces, a West Indian caterer of French and African origin. Site of General George Washington's farewell address to his troops in 1783.
54 Pearl Street

4. Downing's Oyster House

Popular restaurant in the early 1800s owned by black abolitionist Thomas Downing. Its cellar served as a stop on the Underground Railroad.

5. The Wall

African slaves constructed a wall across Manhattan Island in 1653. Extending from the Hudson River to the East River, it is later known as Wall Street.
Wall Street

6. Wall Street Slave Market

Established in 1711 at a pier at Wall Street and the East River, African men, women, and children were sold at the Wall Street Slave Market.
Corner of Wall Street and Front Street

7. 1712 Slave Revolt

A group of enslaved Africans ambushed whites on the outskirts of the city in 1712. Nineteen blacks were executed in response to the slave uprising.
Northwest corner of Maiden Lane and William Street

8. African Free School

Founded in 1787 in a single room for forty boys and girls.
245 William Street (between Ann Street and Fulton Street)

9. St. Peter's Church

Destroyed by fire in 1835, the church was rebuilt chiefly from money given by Pierre Toussaint, a former slave and Haitian philanthropist.
22 Barclay Street (southeast corner of Church Street and Barclay Street)

10. Dr. James McCune Smith

A graduate of the African Free School, Dr. Smith established a medical practice and pharmacy here in 1837.
55 West Broadway (between Murray Street and Park Place)

11. Pinkster Celebration

In the 17th century, the Afro-Dutch community celebrated an African ceremony called Pinkster at this site. The annual celebration coincided with the Christian observance of Pentecost.
City Hall Park

12. 1741 Executions

A rumor of a slave uprising in New York City led to the trial and convictions of thirty-five defendants. All were executed, either by hanging or burning, including thirty-one black men, two white men, and two white women.
City Hall Park

13. Road to Harlem

In 1658, African workers built the road to Harlem (later known as the Boston Post Road).
Park Row (to 110th Street and the East River)

14. 1863 Draft Riots

During four days of citywide violence in July 1863, the homes of African Americans and abolitionists were firebombed. Estimates range from 100 to more than 1,000 people killed, including two men,

Abraham Franklin and Jeremiah Robinson, on Roosevelt Street.
Roosevelt Street (between Cherry Street and Oak Street)

15. Land of the Blacks

From 1643 to 1712, more than thirty farms owned by free blacks spanned the frontier north of the African Burial Ground to 34th Street.
Chinatown, SoHo, Greenwich Village, Little Italy

16. African Burial Ground Memorial Site

An estimated 20,000 men, women, and children were buried in the cemetery here from the late 17th century until it was closed in 1795. Approximately five city blocks, the site was five to six acres in size.
Duane and Elk streets

17. Frederick Douglass

The Hudson River pier where Frederick Washington Bailey, a runaway slave from Maryland, came ashore in 1838. Aided by the Underground Railroad, Bailey achieved freedom and renamed himself Frederick Douglass.
Chambers and West streets (site of Stuyvesant High School)

18. Abyssinian Baptist Church

Founded in 1808 by black members of the First Baptist Church.
40 Wall Street

19. Mother A.M.E. Zion Church

The first African-American church in New York City, founded in 1796.
156 Church Street

21. Ruggles' Boarding House

Rooming house for blacks owned by black abolitionist David Ruggles, and an Underground Railroad station that assisted hundreds of fugitives, including Frederick Douglass. (Ruggles' first boarding house was located at 67 Lispenard Street.)
36 Lispenard Street